AASCD: A Voice of Influence

Dr. Marsha Jones, AASCD President

At the time this newsletter is being written, our legislators have begun the legislative session. We have a new Governor and many newly elected legislators so this promises to be an exciting session.

Governor Beebe has already stated that education is his top priority. With that said, he pledges to "fulfill our obligation to school facilities." He also stated his interest in pre-K, a merit pay pilot program and increases in per-student funding for school districts and special needs students. An interesting new proposal by the Governor is targeting business in support of parent involvement. He is suggesting that state employees be given one day of paid leave per year to volunteer at their children's schools or to attend parent teacher conferences.

As issues unfold, Arkansas ASCD representatives are on-site at the capitol to attend the education committee meetings so we can be up-to date on the progress of new legislation. Legislative proposals that we think are in the best interest of our students are being supported by AASCD through direct contact with legislators and with AASCD written position papers. Areas we do not agree with are also being addressed by direct contact or position papers.

Dr. Mary Gunter and Dr. Frank Holman are our primary liaisons during the session. Additionally, members of the AASCD legislative committee (comprised of Matt McClure, Peggy Woosley, Robert Davis and me) are attentive to the bills being filed and will continue working to create position statements as appropriate.

All of us, as an Association, had a chance to hone our communication skills by attending a one day workshop with Molly McClosky on January 26th. Ms. McClosky is the constituent director from ASCD Worldwide. Her professional experiences are sure to benefit us all during this and future legislative sessions.

I invite each of you to stay connected to the legislative issues of the day. We are posting information on the AASCD web-site, as positions are taken.

Let your voice be heard. Contact your legislator during the session to let him or her know how you feel about an issue. Your voice matters!

2007 AASCD Annual Conference
"Closing the Gap: Ethnic, Gender, Economics"
 June 24-27, 2007
 Hot Springs, Arkansas

2007 Summer Conference Highlights

The theme of the 2007 AASCD Annual Conference, "Closing the Gaps: Ethnic, Gender, and Economics," is intended to focus our attention on practices and strategies that have been shown to have a positive impact on the disparities that exist among identifiable groups of children. Embracing the strengths and addressing the diverse learning needs of our increasingly multicultural, multilingual, economic and gender sensitive student population requires a major transformation of our current school practices. Non-biased responsiveness can help establish learning environments that promote success for all learners. Closing the gaps can help ensure no child gets left behind.

We hope you will make plans now to attend this important professional learning opportunity June 24-27, 2007 in Hot Springs!

Dr. Richard G. Ramsey
Featured Speaker, First General Session
2007 Summer Conference

Dr. Richard Ramsey has 23 years of service as a teacher, coach, athletic director, vice principal, and principal. Having worked in education from kindergarten through 12th grade, his experiences and background enable him to relate to children, youth, and their families and offer guidance to assist them in living in our changing society.

An advocate for children, Ramsey's desire to "make a difference" is paramount in his work with youth. His success working with young African American males has earned him the respect and admiration of colleagues, students, parents, and community leaders.

As the founder of "Lifelong Solutions for Male Students," (a club whose motto is Excellence begins with me) when he was principal of Lake Shore Middle School, Ramsey was credited with reducing the out-of-school suspension rate by 80% in two and a half years and eliminating seven previously active gangs.

This nationally known, respected author and gifted speaker has traveled extensively throughout the United States. His highly acclaimed messages combine real life experiences with humor to create high quality, high-energy programs. His eloquent delivery and content captivate, empower, motivate, inspire, and educate the listener.

Dr. Ramsey conveys a powerful and dynamic message that remains a unique and memorable life experience. His presentation creates an aura that uplifts all listeners emotionally and spiritually. Like a tree, his roots are deeply planted in the soil of humanity. He touches lives via his presentations that light a torch for those who are looking for a way to shine.

Ensuring Your Advocacy is Effective and Efficient

Dr. Angela Olsen, Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction, North Little Rock School District

Educational policies affect our schools and communities, yet often time these policies are developed without taking full consideration of their effect on classroom instruction. In turn our lives, as educators, begin to end when we stay silent on things that matter - where the rubber meets the road. Understanding the urgency of having a voice on behalf of teachers and learners, the Arkansas Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development (AASCD) hosted an Advocacy Drive-in Conference at Cabot High School on January 26, 2007 to ensure that Arkansas educators advocate effectively and efficiently.

Dr. Frank Holman, Cabot Superintendent and Vice-President for AASCD, kicked off the meeting with a discussion of current Arkansas legislative issues that affect accountability in our schools along with our curriculum, instruction, assessments, and rigor. Participants, which included K-12 building level teachers and administrators, district level administrators, and higher education representatives, were invited to ask questions and make contributions to the commentary.

Molly McClosky, Constituent Director for the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development (ASCD), led the group in a walk-through of ASCD's advocacy guide with application. Through a jig-saw activity, participants examined the guide and became familiar with researching issues, building networks, communicating with allies, setting clear goals and reasonable expectations, and developing a plan to take action. Molly shared strategies for working with policy makers and the media and sample forms for community events to heighten the group's ability to advocate effectively and efficiently.

Ms. McClosky next introduced the group to ASCD's Influence and Advocacy website www.ascd.org/political/site/ascdindex.jsp/ where they perused the site for viable research options like legislation, agendas, policy makers, and educational issues and resources such as sample policy papers and professional development.

The visit to the computer lab was followed up with a debriefing exercise that entailed expanded learning opportunities, personalized learning approaches, flexible use of time and structure, and business/community engagement. Participants were afforded various venues for building effective and efficient advocacy skills.

Finally, Ms. McClosky took the participants through a legislative simulation exercise so that they could experience the process. Each team's goal was simply to get reelected. In doing so the group discovered just how easily one's beliefs and platform can be compromised in order to get reelected. Through a grueling eleven rounds of political play, the group learned just how powerful, pointful, reliable, and persistent our messages must be to policy makers.

The life of a political leader often consists of pleasing various facets. Thus, the louder and more united our voice, the more likely we are to be heard and remembered by elected officials when they are called upon to make quick decisions. Our job is to be advocates for children, not to get reelected. We are the educators. We know what works; therefore, our voices and insights are invaluable to decision makers and legislators. Together we can make a difference!

As an officer nominee, what is your vision for AASCD?

My vision for AASCD is one that includes all professional educational stakeholders coming together in a collegial format so instructional issues can be openly discussed. This type of dialogue will lead us to those activities that will allow us to discover the most effective strategies, professional development trainings, and curricular materials that can truly affect classroom instruction. While we often say "work smarter, not harder," it is up to us as academic instructional leaders to assist classroom teachers in making proper selections of these activities so time can be conserved and directed toward instruction. My vision also includes assisting AASCD in the transition of classroom instruction from the more traditional version to one that is more student-centered. Only by shifting this scenario of the classroom environment can we hope to give our students the foundations of higher order thinking skills that will allow them to take learning to a whole new level.

What do you perceive will be your greatest contribution to the AASCD Board?

I believe my greatest contribution to the AASCD Board might be the fact that I will take on the role of trying to insure that our activities are aimed at the implementation level for improvement of instruction as opposed to philosophical discussion that may not have any significant impact on student learning. We must be accountable as educational leaders and remember that our ultimate responsibility is to improve the educational process for all students. The goal of our organization should be to make certain that when every high school graduate steps off the stage with their diploma they have the luxury of making choices about the direction for their life from that point on.

Formal Educational Background/Training

MS - University of Central Arkansas;
Post graduate hours -
Arkansas State University and Harding University

As an officer nominee, what is your vision for AASCD?

There is very fertile ground for the expansion of the organization in the workplace of Arkansas educators. My vision is to provide Arkansas a statewide learning community where ideas, best practices and successful strategies are shared in a collegial network of learners. AASCD can provide the vehicle by which this can take place by providing opportunities for professional learning, contact information and resources. Administrators and faculty can be encouraged to be a part of the learning through increased visibility at conferences and in conjunction with the service cooperatives. I think it is time for some old-fashioned recruiting. Let's find the best practices and the people willing to share them!

What do you perceive will be your greatest contribution to the AASCD Board?

It is my opinion the Board is working very hard to fulfill the mission of the organization. I feel my presence will bring a unique perspective because I have taught in many different settings. I have worked with struggling middle school readers and supervised student teachers. The challenges that face educators today reach to all age levels in every corner and classroom in our state. The ability to consider all perspectives is vital to the continued effectiveness and growth of the organization. I feel my career has prepared me to do just that.

VOTING

Arkansas ASCD members will have the opportunity to vote on the nominees of their choice for AASCD Board positions on June 26, 2007, during the Annual Summer Conference in Hot Springs.

As an officer nominee, what is your vision for AASCD?

As a officer nominee my vision will be to provide opportunities for educators to share ideas and solutions in the area of curriculum and instruction. It is also important to promote the importance of the curriculum and instruction for the future with such stress on NCLB and the serious challenges we face with the restructuring of education as we know it. As an officer nominee I believe we must advocate for programs that would strengthen children's learning. I believe that our children today are the recipients of better learning opportunities than has ever been available. A continuation of a strong commitment to the opportunities of our organization in both professional and personal areas is a must. I would continue to be a voice in the decision-making process and take a lead role in meeting the challenges of today's education, especially in the area of curriculum.

What do you perceive will be your greatest contribution to the AASCD Board?

My years in education are one of my greatest contributions to AASCD Board. I have served in the role of teacher to Director of Instruction. I have had experience in both Arkansas and Texas. This has given a better insight into education and the needs of children. I have actively and eagerly participated in both district and state programs which I have gained much knowledge about successful research based programs. My experience as an educational leader is another contribution that has made me successful.

As an officer nominee, what is your vision for AASCD?

AASCD must be an organization that focuses its energies on improving teaching and learning for all students.

What do you perceive will be your greatest contribution to the AASCD Board?

I have held many positions with the school system and have viewed student learning from those different perspectives. I believe I can offer insight on the mechanisms that promote and impact teaching and learning.

As an officer nominee, what is your vision for AASCD?

AASCD's priority of influence for what is best for kids in curriculum, instruction and assessment would continue to be my vision. Leading the conversation through the Shareholders Regional meetings to listen to the voices of Arkansas educators would be in keeping with my vision. My vision for AASCD is to continue to be the convener of a statewide Professional Learning Community. I believe AASCD is the Vision for the future in identifying and disseminating information on best practices.

What do you perceive will be your greatest contribution to the AASCD Board?

I will work as a collaborative member of the board in building a professional learning community for the diverse members of the organization. Promoting the development of leaders is a goal I have worked toward, in my role as assistant principal, as well as my work as an officer in the 188th Fighter Wing. I am enthusiastic about the possible opportunity to serve in this educational service capacity.

As an officer nominee, what is your vision for AASCD?

I hope that AASCD can influence how educators guide the use of assessments not only to evaluate student performance but to create the data to drive curriculum alignment, professional development, remediation, and teaching strategies in the classroom. I believe that assessments have the potential to create conversations among teachers which will enable educators to evaluate what is working and worth keeping and what is not.

What do you perceive will be your greatest contribution to the AASCD Board?

I will be able to articulate why we need to use data to make decisions, and why we need to keep discussing what we are doing now to develop a practical system for change.

At a time we find ourselves under the pressure of accountability, reading Ish serves to caution us to not leave the creative spirit of the child behind in our zest to meet mandates. Ish is a fable very eloquently illustrated. You will meet Ramon and his younger sister, as you read this fable, and learn how to live ishly ever after!!

A special thanks to my good friend Paula Rawls for introducing me to this lovely book. I have read this book to many groups and have given it as a gift to friends. It is a quick read and should be available through your local book store.

Enjoy!
